What it's like to work at Chipotle.

In current news chipotle is hiring, which brings us to the topic of what it's like to work there. So, we went in and interviewed a few people and we also just observed them. At chipotle they have their own language so the team can work faster and more efficient. They also have roles in the food line, for example there is the tortilla, linebacker, salsa, expo, and cash. Tortilla is the person who is the greater, and grabs your tortilla and all of the stuff in the beginning of the line. The linebacker is responsible for keeping communication with the grill to make sure they don't run out of anything. The expo is in charge of making sure the customer has everything they need, and then bagging up the food. Finally the cash is just simply the cashier. Chipotle takes pride in their fresh food, and makes sure the employees know where the food is from so if asked they know. To end our trip at chipotle we talked to a former manager named there, and she only spoke good things about her experiences. Sounds like an amazing place to work!
